A DEFEAT AT PHILADELPHIA

The Quaker City Players Easily Overcome the Indianapolis Ball Team,

The Score Standing 14 to 3 Against the Visiters-Shreye Pitches Fairly Well, but His Support Is Inadequate-Other Games.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal PHILADELPHIA, Oct 3 .- The Indianapolis club began its final series of games with the Philadelphias to-day, and the home team came off victorious by a score of 14 to 3. The Phila-. delphias took the lead in the first inning, and they were never headed. The Hoosiers batted Saunders very hard, but were unable to hit safely at the proper time. The visitors led the home team in batting, up to the last inning, when the Philadelphias made six hits and evened up the base-hit column. Shreve pitched his first game for Indianapolis since he was injured at Chicago. While he was wild and gave eight bases on balls and made three wild pitches, he was not ineffective, and with good support would have kept the home score down to single figures. The features of the field-play were the infield work of Delehanty, Irwin and Denny. Mulvey led the home team in batting, with four hits, three singles and a two-baser. Fogarty made three singles. Wood made two homerun hits, both over the right field wall, and brought in five runs. Wood's first home run was made in the first inning. The ball went through the curtain of a closed wagon which was driving down the middle of Broad street, and frightened the driver se badly that he fell off the seat and his horses went off on a gallop. The ball was not recovered. Seery also made a home run on a hit similar to Wood's. Wood pitched the last inning for the Philadelphias, and after two hits had been made off him he retired the side without a run. Indianapolia scored in the fourth inning by a single by Bassett and a two-baser by Schoenick, and in the seventh on two-basers by Shreve and Hines. In the eighth Seery made a home run. The crowd numbered 24L Score: PHILADELPHIA.

Senator Sherman Indorses the New Tariff Bill--The Benet Circular.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.-Mr. Allison reported the tariff bill, and said he would call it up for action on Monday next

Mr. Sherman said he would be compelled to leave the city this afternoon, and would like to be indulged in making a few remarks on the tariff bill. Unanimous consent was given, and he addressed the Senate. He complimented the subcommittee on the work done, and severely criticised the House bill. In his judgment there would be few defects found in the Senate substitute. It would be found to be a very perfet bill. Among other things, it was a substantial compendium of the provisions for the collection of internal revenue and of customs duties. It contained a positive reduction of revenues to the extent of $73,688,000. The reduction was on a few articles. He believed that the Senate bill was, on the whole, the best revenue bill ever introduced in Congress, and that if it could be taken up free from party prejudices and considered and de-bated and amended is might be made the most perfect revenue measure ever put on the statute books. The issue was now fairly made before the people, and was to be tried by them. It was a plain, fair, square issue between a "tariff for revenue only" and a "tariff for revenue protection." It was a question whether the articles necessary for human life should be made by American labor or by foreign labor, whether the wages of American laborers should depend on the wages of European laborers, or should depend on the American policy of protecting all forms of labor and production

The Senate then resumed consideration of Mr. Hale's resolution of Monday, calling on the Secretary of War for an explanation of General Benet's circular as to discharges of Republican employes in United States areenals and armor-

Mr. Cockrell said that the last Republican administration, in its last year, had made more removals and appointments within the classified civil service than the Democratic administration had done in about two years of its existence. If he had been at the tend of a department under the present administration, he would have weeded out all the incompetent appointments under the spoils system, and would have done his best to see that honest, competent and wellqualified persons, certified by the Civil-service Commission, were appointed in their places, and he would have prayed that ninty-nine out of every one hundred of them might be Democrats until there were as many Democrats in office as there were Republicans. After that be should have disapproved of any discrimination on account of politics. Mr. Cockreil, at the close of a long speech, asserted that President Cleveland had redeemed and eacredly kept every pledge that he had made in relation to the civil service. As to the Benet circular, be understood that that officer was in political sympathy with the Senator from Maine, but he had no objection to the adoption of the resolution, and had no donot that the Secretary of War would furnish a satisfactory explanation. He saw no wrong in turning out of office Republican soldiers and putting Democratic soldiers in their places. He did not believe, however, that the Secretary of War directed General Benet to issue the circular as confidential. Mr. Hale commented on the fact that Mr. Cockrell, the "thick and thin defender of the administration," had not been able in a twohours' speech, to sav one word in defense of the order in which the War Department proclaimed a war of extermination on women and children. The reason was, nothing could be said in defense of it And yet pobody, Mr. Hale said, would be called to account for it. If Mr. Cleveland was the sincere reformer which he was claimed to be, somebody ought to be punished for violating every single principle which he had advanced as the guide and rule of his administration. Mr. Chandler characterized the Benet circular as the most discreditable of all the emanations in violation of the President's professions of civil-service reform. Never before in the history of the government had the politics of female employes, or children in the workshops of the government, been referred to as a reason for employment or discharge. Mr. Hawley earnestly invited the attention of Democratic Senators to the question of Mr. Claveland's contribution to the Democratic campaign fund. If it was true that Mr. Cleveland had sent $10,000 to a political committee on which were prominent officers of the government, the conclusion was inevitable that he had committed a crime punishable by fine or impriscoment, or both. Nothing provoked a louder roar of laughter in Democratic circles than to pretend the administration was a civil-service reform administration. It was only in the Senate that any man could make that pretense without being received with unbounded ridicule -- with pity for his credibility, or with contempt for his audacity. Mr. Hale moved to amend the resolution by adding to it instructions to the Secretary of War to transmit copies of any further orders or circulars relating to the employment of persons in his department since March 4, 1885, and copies of any correspondence with any subordinate or other person relating to the politics of any employe.

Without action on the amendment or resolution, the matter went over till to-morrow. Mr. Stewart introduced a resolution, which was referred to the committee on contingent expenses, instructing the committee on mines and mining to inquire, during the recess, into the foreign ownership and operations of mines in the Territories. A Political Quarrel Leads to the Killing of Jacob Holmes by Charles Spencer. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

CORYDON, Oct. 3 .- Jacob Holmes was shot and killed by Charles Spencer, at DePauw, this county, last night. Spencer came to Corydon, to day, surrendered himself to the sheriff, and is now in jail. He is a young man of good appearance, and is of good family. Holmes was a blacksmith, and was forty years of age. Speucer's version of the tragedy is that Holmes bantered him for a fight, and followed him two hours, when he finally shot him in self-defense. Holmes was shot five times in the back, and the plea of self-defense is not plausible. From Spencer's attorney the following particulars are learned, Spencer himself refusing to make a statement: There was a Democratic meeting at DePauw yesterday, and in the afternoon Edward Hancock came upon the streets with a large roll of money, which he said be wanted to bet on Cleveland. He was drunk and was very abusive, and said that if there was any Republican who did not like his deportment that Charley Spencer would do his fighting. Holmes, it is said, then began to banter Spencer for a fight, and kept it up until 9 o'clock, when he was killed. Holmes is a blacksmith and has only been in the county a few months. It is not known where he came from. At this place, this evening, James Yeager fired two shots at Barney Sheppard, without escial to the Indianapolis Journal. LOGANSPORT, Oct. 3.-A few weeks ago Mrs. Ida Mumma, of Dayton, O., came to this county and purchased a farm. Soon afterwards she took possession, bringing with her household furniture, farm implements and stock. With her also was a man, and they lived together as husband and wife, under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Beck. On Monday last they were arrested on the charge of adultery, at the instance of Jacob H. W. Mumma, a farmer and dairyman, near Dayton, O., and to-day Mrs. Mumma and Beck were held in bonds to appear at the November term of court. It is a complicated case and nothing to compare with it has ever been in the courts here. Mrs. Mumma left her husband, Jacob Mumms, because of his immoral practices with other women, which practices he admits in an agreement of separation. She says that she understood that she was divorced by the agreement . She and Beck have a marriage certificate showing that they were married in Covington, Ky., in March. She testifled, and Mumma admitted, that he had three times attempted to kill his wife, by poison, by putting carpet-tacks in her medicine, and by tearing out a bridge over which she would pass. Mrs. Mumma is thirty-two, Beck is twenty-two, and Mumma is sixty-five years of age.

Special to the Indiacapolis Journal Кокомо, Oct. 3.—One Elihu Wilson Conway came to this city on Monday, representing himself as an agent for the New York Tribune. He presented credentials that seemed genuine, and showed commendatory letters from some prominent Indiana Republicans. Withal he was suspicious-looking character, and the Tribune was wired to ascertain the truth about him. A reply came that the Tribune knew nothing whatever of Conway, and that he was a fraud. He was promptly arrested, and is now in fail, though not until he had taken many subscriptions to the paper ne claimed to be representing, at 15 cents the remainder of the campaign. He spent his money at the local bars, and will now have to answer to the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses:

His plan has been to sell supplies and receive school orders in advance of the arrival of the goods, cashing the orders at his earliest convenience. The goods are now here in the express-office with C. O. D. attachment, and the schoolmen are angry. Green has gone West, and an officer is in pursuit. He obtained $1,000 or $1,500 in this way."

EMPEROR WILLIAM AT VIENNA.

Much Embracing and Exchanging of Divine-Right Kisses.

VIENNA, Oct. 3 .- The Emperor of Germany strived here this morning. Emperor Francis Joseph, attired in a Prussian uniform and wearing the decoration of the Prussian Order of the Black Eagle, received the Emperor at the railstation. As the train bearing the Kaiser drew into the station band played "The Watch on the Rhine." Emperor Francis Joseph raised his hand to his belmet in salute and advanced to the foot-board of the car, where stood Emperor William, clad in the uniform of the Austrian infantry regiment of which he is honorary colonel, and wearing the decoration of the Order of St. Stephen of Hungary, and the collar of the Black Eagle The sovereigns cordially embraced and kissed each other and shook each other's hands. During the exchange of greetings they remained with their hands clasped. Emperor William then advanced and shook hands with the archdukes, who were also present, and kissed the Crown Prince and Archdukes Charles, Louis and Albert, while Emperor Francis Joseph shook hands with Count Herbert Bismarck and Prince Reuss, of the Kaiser's party. Emperor William passed before the guard of honor and received various deputations. He shook hands with Governor Possinger, Chief of Police Kraus, and Burgomaster Uhl, who expressed the pleasure of the city at the Kaiser's visit. The Emperors left the station arm-in-arm, followed by the other visitors and those who had received them, and were driven to the Hofburg. A large crowd had gathered at the station and cheered enthusiastically as the two Emperors emerged from the station and drove away.

The imperial carriage made a triumphal progress through the streets to the Hofburg. The windows and balconies of the houses along the route were gaily decorated, and were filled with ladies, who waved their handgerchiefs in welcome of the imperial visitor. Empress Elizaboth welcomed Emperor William in the wing of the palace which will be occupied by him. After a conversation with the Empress and Crown Princess Stephanie, Emperor William received visits from a number of distinguished persons. The popular preparations for the reception of the German Emperor were on the grandest scale. On many houses the German, Austrian and Hungarian colors were flying. During the early indraing, a great crowd gathered at the depot and along the route to the Hofburg. Every window along the line to the Ringstrasse was occupied. The western depot, to which none but members of the imperial party were admitded, was bedecked with flowers. The waitingroom was gorgeously decorated. The Kaiser-King of Prussia's infanty regiment furnished the guard of honor. Troops of all arms lined the route to the palace. The Tenth Hussars are acting as a guard of honor at the Hofburg. Her Von Szechenyi, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, and the other members of the Austrian Ministry, the Governcr, burgemaster, commander of the troops, and prominent German residents of the city were at the depot. The members of the diplomatic corps and the officers of the reserve landwehr were presented to Emperor William at the Hofburg. After visiting the German embassy Emperior William took luncheon at the Imperial palace and afterward visited the Academy of Education and Arts. In the afternoon he received Prince Philip of Coburg, the bishop of Prague, and Herr Tisza, the Hungarian Premier. In the evening a banquet to Emperor William was given by the Emper and Empress of Austria. Among the guests were the Austrian Crown Prince and Princess, the Austrian aschdukes and archduchesses, Prince and Princess Philip of Coburg, and Prince Henry of Reuss, the German embassador and his wife. To-morrow the Emperor will receive the Austrian military chiefs and the foreign ministers.

Red-Ink Journalism in London. LONDON, Oct. 3.-The Evening News created a tremenduous sensation this afternoon by printing in red-ink fac similes of the letter and postal card received a few days ago at the office of the Central News Company, purporting to have been written by the Whitechapel murderers. In these communications the writer gloats over his crimes and threatens to commit others, in defiance of the police, of whose efficiency he expresses a very poor opinion. The News was eagerly bought and the venders raised their price to sixpence per copy, and later to a shilling, without appreciably decreasing the demand. The police are inclined to the belief that the letter and card are genuine, and intend to have them lithographed in colors and posted in every available place in the metropolis, hoping thereby to secure identification of the chirography. There is absolutely nothing new in the way of a clew to the identity of the murder, and many persons now believe that he will never be caught.

How Comrade Cleveland Would Probably Enjoy Himself. Anderson Herald.

The recent reunion of General Harrison's old regiment-the Seventieth Indiana-and the rousing welcome the boys gave their gallant leader, reminds us of the fact that General Cleveland's old regiment has not beld any reunions yet, or if it has we have failed to see any notice of it in the dispatches. Now, why cannot Colonel Cleveland's (aubstitute's) regiment get up a reunion and have as good h time as was had by General Harrison and his comrades? Major Cleveland would enjoy an occasion of this kind as highly as going fishing on Memorial Day, or vetoing a pension bill in favor of a crippled or diseased soldier, or the widow and orphans of some poor fellow who was so unfortunate as to lose his life while fighting for his

Captain Cleveland enlisted (was drafted) in a New York regiment, and served (by substitute) gallantly (with the b'hoys who nightly painted Buffalo red) during the war. He returned from the war a physical wreck to respond to the address of welcome the reunion of his (substitute's) regiment he would be given an opportunity to relate how he marched down to the wharf and 'dickered' with George Bruiski, whom he induced to take his place in the army for $150 at a time when the government was paying recruits a bounty of $300. He could tell of the solemn pledges he made to assist his substitute in case the latter returned alive and needed assistance; how when the poor fellow came home with incuriable lung troubles he sought the promised help only to find that his principal (Cieveland) had grown forgetful of his pledges and deaf to his (the substitute's) story of misery and want: how the broken-down and povertystricken "pauper soldier" was shuffled about from one public alms-house to another until death finally relieved the wretched being from his intolerable suffering. How a recital of these noble deeds by Sergeant Cleveland would arouse

All this would be mild, however, as compared with what would follow Corporal Cleveland's description of a pension voto and the heroism required to tackle a stack of them numbering three or four hundred. How the hats and handkerchiefs would fly into the sir when he related the excellent jokes he got off on the applicants whose pension bills had passed both branches of Congress and fatied to become laws because of his vetoes.

But when Private Cleveland recited his original jokes the ne plus ultra of enthusiasm would be reached. Empty coat sleaves would flutter in the air, wooden pegs, which, in the absence of the natural members, are made to do duty as legs, would pound the floor, and weak and decayed lungs would vie with sounder ones in "The number of instances in which those of our soldiers who rode horses during the war were injured by being thrown forward upon their saddles indicate that those saddles were very dangerous contrivances. "I am satisfied there is not a particle of merit in this claim, and no facts are presented to me which entitle it to charitable consideration." But the boys are out for a good time and the mirth must be kept up, and the hilarity over the above has not died down until he sets the old fellows a going again with the following gem, the laugh being on A. J. Wilson this time; "Whatever else may be said of this claimant's must be conceded that he accumulated a great deal of disability." If Mrs. Mary Norman should chance to be present she would feel called upon to invite the boys to "come and take something" at her expense on account of the refined humor Mr. Cleveland dropped into in vetoing her pension

"In an attempt to meet this objection it was claimed as lately as 1685, on behalf of the widow. that her husband's wound caused deafness to such an extent that at the time he was drowned be was unable to hear the ferryman, with whom be was crossing the river, call out that the boat was sinking. How he could have saved his life if he had heard the warning is not stated." The entire time of the reunion could not be taken up with fun, so Mr. Cleveland would be compelled to desist for want of time to go
